

Confirmation Bias Sprite

Creature – Small Fey

“Marginally Significant”: When evaluating data that align with your beliefs, you accept a lower standard of evidentiary support.

Cherry Picking: You may cite only references that support your argument; any references that contradict your argument can be ignored.

“When two paths diverge, why not take the one you wanted?” – Adage of the Twilight Court